John (Janos) Meszaros (1895-1958)

Until this year, I never knew anything about Uncle John Meszaros, except his name, and that he was Grammy Elizabeth (Meszaros) Szatmary's brother, and that he was supposed to have lived in California. That's it!

When I began collecting our Meszaros family history I never thought that I would find so much information about Uncle John. He left such a long paper trail that I decided to put it in a separate volume.

John was born in 1895, the first of nine children born to Janos Meszaros and Erzsebet Cseh, in Csurgo, Fejer, Hungary (now called Fehervarcsurgo). His sister Erzsebet (Grammy) was born the following year (1896), followed by seven other brothers and sisters. Except for his baptismal record in the Csurgo parish registers, we know nothing about John's early life in Hungary. There are no letters, photos, diaries, newspaper stories, or family oral history.

We do know that he was the first member of his immediate family to immigrate to America, when he was only 17 years old. He departed from the port of Fiume, Hungary (now called Rijeka, in Croatia) on June 8,1912 and 18 days later he arrived in New York, on June 26, on the passenger ship Ivernia.

Janos crossed the Atlantic Ocean with his Aunt Julianna (Szabo) Csaktonnyai, his father's sister. Aunt Julianna and her husband Janos Csaktonnyai are listed as Janos's godparents on his baptismal record. The passenger ship list also states that Aunt Julianna paid Janos's fare from Hungary to the United States.

The Ivernia passenger list of 1912 shows that Uncle John's and Aunt Julianna's contact person in the United States is a John (Becsak? Lorsai? the handwriting is hard to read) in Milwaukee, but I wasn't able to find any record for him in the census records, city directories, draft registrations, etc. under either name.

The next record we have for John is his 1917 draft registration card for World War I, which shows that he worked at the Keystone Glue Company in South Milwaukee, and that he lived on Montana Avenue. His sister Elizabeth (Grammy) worked at the Federal Rubber Co. in Cudahy.

The last record we have for Uncle John in the Milwaukee area is a note that he filed his "Declaration of Intention" (also called "first papers") to become a citizen, on December 21, 1921 in the circuit court of Milwaukee County. This document shows that Uncle John had moved from Montana Avenue (listed on his 1917 draft registration) to Marshall Avenue in South Milwaukee.

John moved a lot during his lifetime, so there's no telling how many different places he lived in South Milwaukee. He never married and never owned a house. He always lived as a boarder/roomer in South Milwaukee and various places in California, or in company dormitories in mining towns out in California and Nevada. One strange thing is that we have many different records for John, except for census records—he's missing from all of the 1920 to 1940 censuses!

John's paper trail continues after he moved from South Milwaukee to California on July 26, 1923, according to his naturalization papers. First he settled in the San Pedro area for a few years, working in the oil industry. San Pedro is located on the oceanfront next to Long Beach and it used to be a separate city, but Los Angeles annexed it to use as a shipping port facility. We have city directory listings for John for 1924 and 1930 living as a boarder in different houses.

On December 26, 1928 John filed his "second papers," his Petition for Naturalization, when he was living in San Pedro (Los Angeles), California. His petition was approved on April 12, 1929 by the district court for the Southern District of California. To the best of my knowledge John is the only member of our Meszaros or Szatmary families who immigrated to the United States and then petitioned for and received citizenship.

The only non-official record I was able to find for John is in the San Bernardino Times of September 4, 1931. There is a brief obituary for Gus Pinter and John is listed as one of the pall-bearers. Pinter is a Hungarian name and some of the other pallbearers' names also look Hungarian -- Lawrence Szabo [Szabo is in our family tree], Alex Pulkesz and A. Kapak.

After becoming a citizen in 1929, at the age of 34, John registered to vote every two years, from 1930 to 1946, according to the California election records posted at Ancestry.com. The election records show his various addresses and his party affiliations. In 1928 he registered as a Republican, then in 1932 he switched to the Democratic Party, where he remained until 1946, when our election records end. He might have left California some time before 1948 and moved to Nevada in search of work.

After John's last voter registration in California in 1946, there are no more records until 1957, when he applied for Social Security at the age of 62. John died one year later, on October 30, 1958, in Tonopah, Nevada. His death certificate lists colon cancer as the cause of death.

His sister Elizabeth (Grammy) had colon problems too. Aunt Helen (Szatmary) Papierski said that Grammy had a colostomy in 1948 and suffered the after-effects until her death in 1968. There may be a family history of cancer, but I suspect that John's exposure to toxic chemicals, fumes, and mining dust in his jobs in the oil, chemical, and mining industries was also an important factor.

R.I.P. Uncle John.

R.M.S. Ivernia (I)

Ivernia, launched in 1899, was built for Cunard by C.S. Swan & Hunter of Newcastle, England. She made her maiden voyage, from Liverpool to New York, on 14 April 1900. Two months later she was placed on the Liverpool-Boston route for which she was intended, and remained on that route until December 1911. Ivernia was then placed on a Trieste-New York route and remained there until World War I, except for the winter of 1912-13, when she returned to the Boston-Liverpool route.

Taken over as a troopship in September 1914, Ivernia was torpedoed and sunk on New Year's Day 1917 by UB-47 off Cape Matapan, Greece, with 2,400 Scottish soldiers on board. Eighty-five soldiers and 36 crew members were killed. At 106 feet (32.31 m) above the main deck, Ivernia's funnels (and those of her sister, Saxonia) were the tallest single funnels ever installed on an ocean liner.

Some of the cards on this page appear to show Ivernia's sister Saxonia. Saxonia had a higher bridge, and forward of the bridge had two high ventilators and different positioning of the lifeboat.

SAN PEDRO AT A GLANCE

San Pedro, California (municipally a part of the City of Los Angeles because of its location on that harbor) is today one of the most prosperous and thriving cities of the Western Coast. The harbor was discovered by Juan Rodriguez Cabrillo in the year 1542 A. D., and since the very dawn of history on the Pacific Coast it has been known as a port of call for vessels of all kinds, and from a modest beginning has grown into a seaport with a total of 67 ship lines plying to and from all parts of the world.

The community of San Pedro, including the waterfront, is under the government of the City of Los Angeles and is subject to the laws and regulations of that city.

The Chamber of Commerce of San Pedro, therefore, is the nearest official body, and aids and assists the officials of the city government in the administration of the affairs of the Harbor district by constantly placing before them our many problems due to the rapid growth of this district.

The breakwater at San Pedro is 2.11 miles long. The revolving light is 73 feet high, with 67,000 candlepower, and has a range of fourteen miles.

The monthly payroll in the harbor district is approximately seven million eight hundred thousand dollars per month, and in addition to this we have the benefit of one and one-half million dollars per month payroll in the Navy, the Navy payroll being with us approximately nine months of the year.

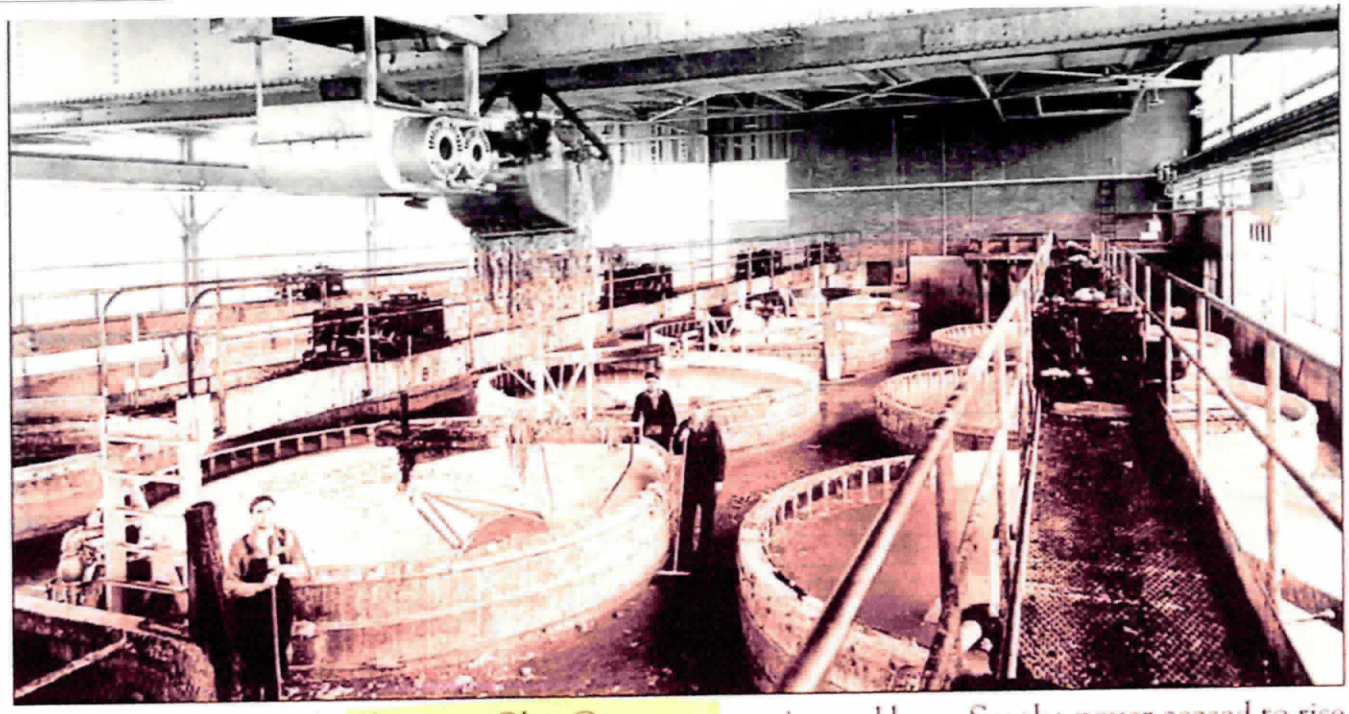
Keystone Glue Co. ad in Popular Science, Feb. 1936

Copyrighted material



The washing vats at the Keystone Glue Company are pictured here. Smoke never ceased to rise from the plant because of its 24-hour production. The plant made four million pounds of hide glue byproducts per year. These byproducts were used in the silk- and soap-making industries. Ninety-five percent of the material was derived from green hide fleshings, byproducts of the tanning industry. (March 26, 1933.)

A pond to cool water used in the glue-manufacturing process was built at the Keystone Glue Company, Trenton Avenue. The pond was 75 feet long and 45 feet wide. At the same time, the interior of the building was refurbished to house new machinery enabling the company to manufacture a higher grade of tankage, a byproduct used as fertilizer. (August 5, 1934.)

An employee of the Keystone Tanning and Glue Company punches out for the last time on October 19, 1951, as the company shuts its doors. Keystone had operated in Williamsport since 1907 and employed 125 at its plant on Trenton Avenue, in the Newberry section of Williamsport. The factory closed because its owner, the United States Leather Company, was disposing of its leather plants. The use of synthetic chemicals in a larger-scale industrial process led to the demise of the many tanneries nationwide. The Grit newspaper reported, "Men who worked at the company for years suddenly felt they had the rug yanked out from under them." (October 21, 1951.)

Westend

From 1934-1948 John Meszaros worked for Westend Chemical Co. and perhaps other employers in the area of Westend and Trona next to Searles Lake, close to Death Valley. Sometime after 1948 he moved to Tonopah in Nye County, Nevada, northwest of Las Vegas, where he died in 1958.

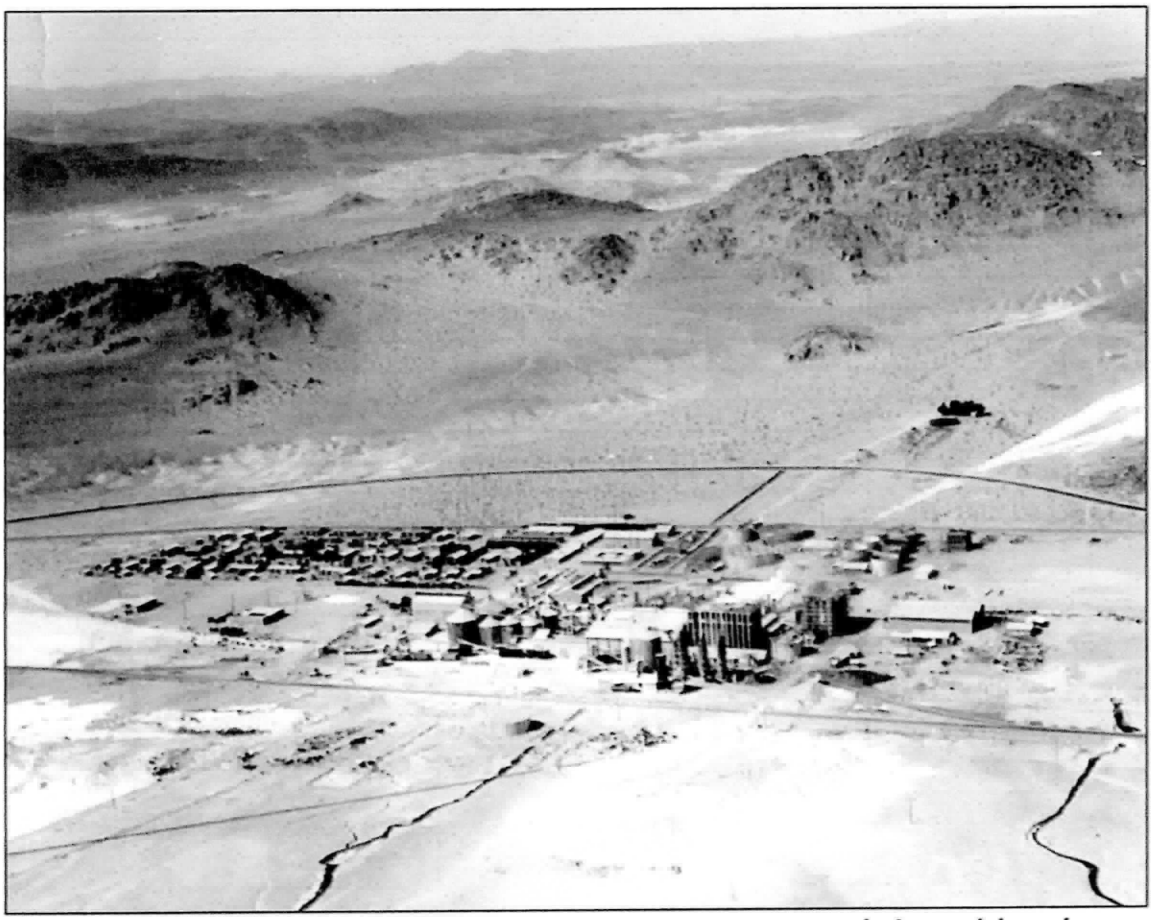
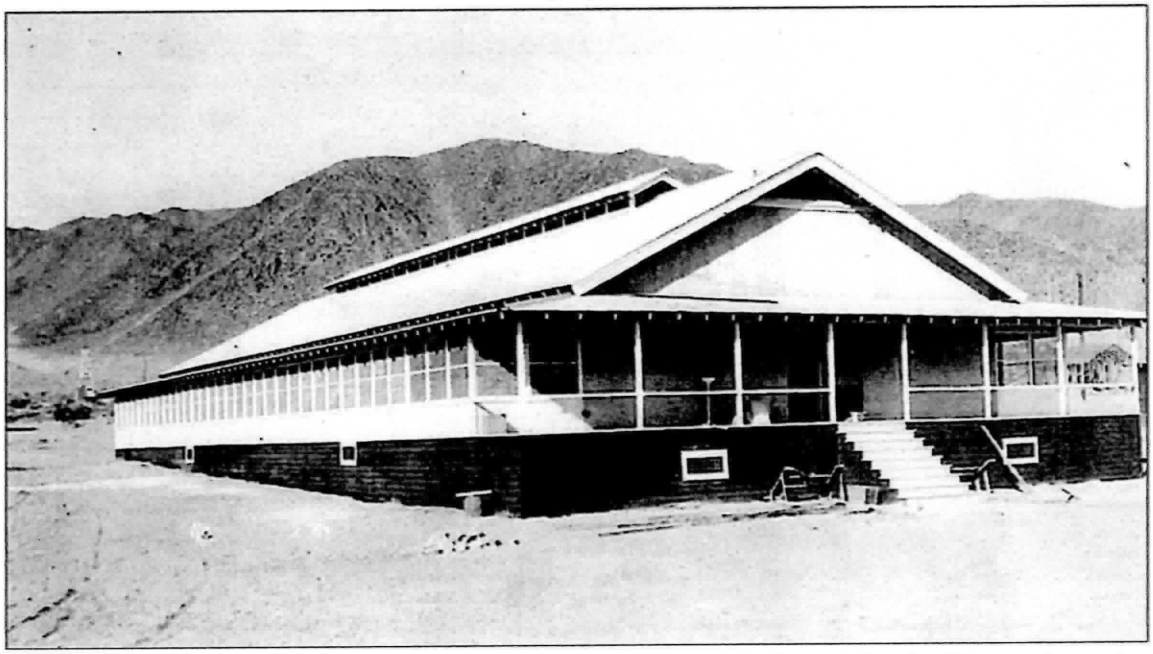
Trona , Feb. 1941



This 1940s photograph shows that the Westend community was composed of several dozen homes. Those who lived at Westend had to be an employee of the chemical plant.



There was also a small community supporting the Borosolvay plant. Like the Trona plant, the Borosolvay plant was staffed by mostly single men. And like Trona, the company provided bunkhouses for them. This is the No. 2 Bunkhouse at Borosolvay.

Copyrighted material

Even into the 1940s, most of the workers of American Trona Corporation, later AP&CC, were single and lived in one of the 15 bunkhouses owned by the company. The early bunkhouses were single story and contained about 20 rooms. Later, the company built two-story structures with 40 rooms. The rooms were typically 16 feet square and occupied by two men. They included beds and desks for each man and a wash basin. Restrooms and showers were shared by all. Dining was in the mess hall or coffee shop, also company-owned.

The mess hall was huge. It had table space to serve nearly 400 at one seating, close to the number of men on day shift. While they may not have always used tablecloths, they always used porcelain table service and metal utensils. Service was family style, with large bowls or trays of food being provided to each table.

The coffee shop offered both counter and booth service with menus and waitresses. Where one was allowed to sit was determined by status in the company, and hourly workers were expected to eat in the mess hall. However, the soda fountain was open to all, and the soda jerk would mix an ice-cream malt to order.

WEST END CHEMICAL COMPANY

OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT

Oakland, California, February 28, 1923.

To the Stockholders:

Activity at the Company's Anniversary Mine, in Clark County, Nevada, during the past year has been directed mainly along three lines: First, the construction of a calciner at the mine, with the necessary accompanying camp buildings; second, the opening up of the mine itself, preparatory to large production; and third, the improvement of transportation.

The first unit of the calciner was fired up early in July, 1922, and has been in continuous operation since. It is of the internally fired, revolving type, and is equipped with vapor fans, dust saving apparatus, and the necessary screens and auxiliary equipment. This first unit has a capacity of from forty-five to sixty tons of ore per day. Storehouses for supplies and calcined ore have been constructed both at the calciner and at our private spur on the main line of the Union Pacific railroad, twenty-five miles distant. Storage for fuel oil has been provided to the amount of fifty-thousand gallons. An aerial tramway has been built, about a quarter of a mile in length, which delivers ore from the mouth of the main working tunnel to the calciner, located on a bench about two hundred feet above the tunnel. With this tramway, one man delivers ten tons of ore per hour. The plant is equipped with a laboratory, storage bins, rock crushers, elevators, and the usual subsidiary apparatus. An operating camp has been built which includes a boarding house, bunk houses, staff quarters and office building. Cottages for workmen with families are being added. An adequate supply of water for all industrial uses is obtained from wells on the company's property. It is also used for bathing and all camp purposes, except drinking, all the buildings being piped with it. Electric power and lights for the mine, calciner and village are supplied by an oil engine, direct-connected with a generator, capable of delivering 150 electric horse power.

The ore deposit has been explored by the driving of our lower, or main tunnel along the vein, and opening up the ore body for stoping by raises and intermediate drifts. The consistent width and average value of ore, in the vein, as disclosed in this work is most unusual. There has been no tendency whatever for the ore to form in isolated lenses or pockets as is customary in other colemanite deposits. It cuts through the mountain with almost mathematical uniformity as regards widths of ore and average value. This condition insures low mining costs and makes the correct estimation of ore reserves an easy matter, with practically no guess work about it. In this connection it is worth while to state that underground developments are more than justifying the estimates made by Mr. Hoyt S. Gale in his description of this property. After his visit early in 1921, he estimated from surface examination only that there would be found a minimum of 400,000 tons of ore, and that the maximum might be five times as much. Since Mr. Gale visited the property we have performed about three thousand feet of underground work on this vein. The conclusion reached from this work is that there is a reasonable expectation of 1,236,000 tons of ore above the lower tunnel. Moreover, this tunnel has followed good ore for a distance of about twelve hundred feet, therefore it is certain that additional tonnage lies below it. One can only hazard a guess at the amount, but quite probably at least as much as there is above it. It is to be borne in mind that these figures represent only that part of the deposit lying between Lovell Wash and the next big wash to the east. This is the section of the vein marked by the bold outcrop. What amount of ore may be found in the extension of the vein in either direction beyond these arbitrary boundaries is only a matter of conjecture. No work has been done so far to throw any light on the matter.

Our transportation situation has improved greatly. While we were forced by poor road conditions to depend upon caterpillars for hauling during our early operations, we have been improving our road continually. The question of grades has never given us any trouble as there are no excessive grades on the road. Our main trouble was the road surface, which in places was of a nature which cut badly. By resurfacing these places with rock we are overcoming the difficulty. Our road has improved sufficiently so that about one-half our tonnage is now transported to the railroad on auto trucks, and it is planned to do away with caterpillars altogether during 1923.

The contemplated Colorado River Dam, which has been discussed so much in the press recently, is a matter of great interest to this company, inasmuch as the most favored dam site—Boulder Canyon—is situated only about twenty miles distant from our mine, and a railroad from the main line to this site would pass within about a mile of the company's calciner. As the first step in building the dam would be the construction of this railroad, the early consummation of this work is to be hoped for. It would mean immediate reduction in transportation cost, and ultimately cheap hydro-electric power available for use. For this reason your directors have watched with interest Mr. Hoover's efforts to reconcile the conflicting claims of the various states involved. The indications are that favorable action will be taken on this question soon.

Many difficulties had to be overcome in carrying on this plant construction and other work. The mine is situated in the heart of the hot, arid deserts of the Colorado River Basin, hundreds of miles from a real base of supplies, and twenty-five miles from rail communication. There were no roads, no water, no habitations. The job was, to begin in a wilderness and build up a completely functioning industrial community, in the space of a few months. It meant the purchase at distant points of tools, building material, machinery and supplies, the organization of a transportation system capable of handling many hundred tons of incoming material, some individual pieces of which weighed over twenty tons. It meant organizing and maintaining a large camp of workmen, distant from labor markets, food and water supply. The heaviest part of the work had to be done in the two hottest months of the year, with daytime temperature ranging from 115 degrees upwards, and sleep nearly impossible at night. The road at times was a succession of bottomless chuck holes lying under a blanket of powdery white dust, inches deep. To keep up the morale of an organization under such circumstances is no small task, but in spite of obstacles, and the lack of usual facilities, the calciner was operating within three months after the arrival of the first car of machinery.

It is interesting to compare the difficulties and accomplishments of this work, with the writer's own experience during the early pioneer days of the Borax industry. In many ways the problems of today are the problems of forty or fifty years ago,—heat, drought, distance from base; history repeating itself. It was while meeting these desert conditions in other activities that the writer in 1872 made his first discovery of Borax at Teel's Marsh, Nevada, which discovery, after various vicissitudes in securing the property, initiated the Borax industry in this country, which has since grown to an enormous extent and also resulted in reducing the price from 35c per ounce to its present low figure, increasing the output to such an extent that Borax is now not only a household article, but put to several hundred uses in industry and art. About ten years after the production of Borax was begun from the Teels' Marsh deposit, the Death Valley colemanite deposit was acquired and developed by the writer, increasing the supply to a much greater extent than was possible from Teels' Marsh.

General conditions in Death Valley, forty years ago, were probably worse than those encountered and overcome at the Anniversary Mine. But standards have changed, too, and more is expected now, in the way of accomplishment and speed, than was required a generation and a half ago. Our old machinery was not so heavy or cumbersome, nor did it require the niceties in erection and operation, of modern plants, but our distances were greater and our location much more inaccessible. Teels' Marsh was one hundred and eighty miles and Death Valley one hundred and sixty-four miles from the railroad, whereas your deposit in Las Vegas, Nevada, is twenty-five miles from the railroad. Instead of the caterpillar-tractor or auto truck of today, we put our faith then in the Twenty Mule Team. The caterpillar or auto truck does not eat or drink, but on the other hand, the mule team never broke down on the road. For speed the caterpillar is about on an equal basis with the mule team, but the auto truck now in use is speedier.

Refineries are now in operation at San Francisco, California, and Chauncey, New York. Supply depots are maintained at Chicago, Philadelphia, New York City, El Paso, Texas, Los Angeles, Montreal and Toronto, Canada.

The company has had a cordial reception from the consumers of Borax and Boric Acid with the result that the orders have grown from month to month to such an extent that an increase in our manufacturing facilities is being considered by your Board of Directors.

While the present price of Borax is low, prospects for higher prices and a constantly increasing demand are good.

The year has been one of real accomplishment and we look forward to continued progress through increased output and facilities, and in other ways.

F. M. SMITH,
President.

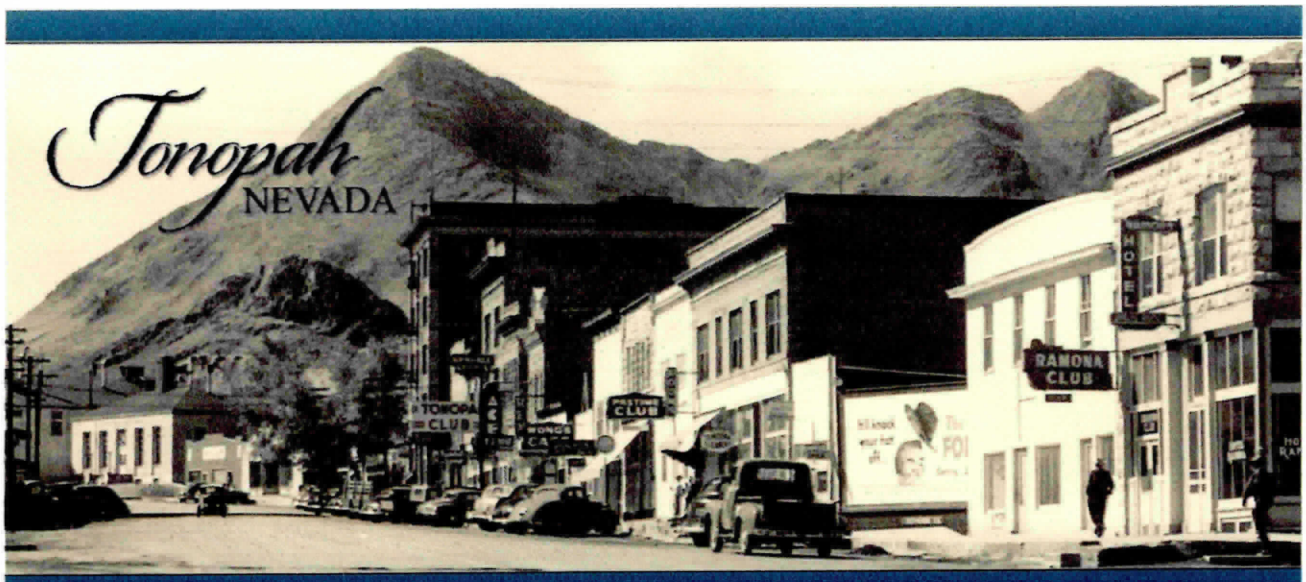
VIEW OF TONOPAH, NEVADA.



History of Tonopah

Tonopah Springs, later the site of one of the richest booms in the West, was an Indian campground for many years, long before Jim Butler spent a chilly night here.

A number of stories exist as to how Butler discovered the ore. The most popular version is that Butler's mule wandered away and when Butler found the ornery critter, he noticed an outcropping that appeared to be heavily laced with silver. Butler took a number of samples. The date was May 19, 1900. This quiet start belied the actual importance of the discovery. Butler firmly believed he had discovered an important silver deposit but he had trouble convincing the assayer he visited in nearby Klondike. The assayer told him the samples were worthless, consisting mainly of iron, and he threw them into the back of his tent.

Butler was still convinced that his find was genuine.

On his way back to his Monitor Valley ranch, he stopped at Tonopah Springs once more to gather samples. Back at his ranch, Butler put the samples on his windowsill. Not too much time passed before Tasker Oddie, later to be governor of Nevada, stopped at the ranch and spied the ore samples. He offered to pay for another assay and Butler agreed to this. Butler, in turn, offered Oddie a quarter interest of the assay. Oddie heartily agreed. He took the ore samples to William Gayhart, an Austin assayer, and offered Gayhart a quarter interest in his quarter. Gayhart found the assay ran as high as $600 a ton. When Oddie was notified of the value of the samples, he immediately sent an Indian runner to Butler's ranch to alert him of the rich find. Butler did not react rapidly. He stayed at his ranch to complete the hay harvest and did not even bother to file claims on the lode site!

News of the discovery traveled to Klondike and soon, scores of eager prospectors were searching around Tonopah Springs, to no avail, for Butler's lode.

Butler finally went to Belmont, and on August 27, 1900, he and his wife filed on eight claims near the springs. Six of these - Desert Queen, Burro, Valley View, Silver Top, Buckboard, and Mizpah - turned into some of the biggest producers the state has ever had. Work was begun on the Mizpah mine in October 1900, and a camp called Butler formed nearby. On Christmas Day, 1900, 14 men were living in the camp including Butler and Tasker Oddie, Nye County's new District Attorney. Butler decided to lease out all of his claims for one year, from December 1900, to December 1901. Soon, the cry of "Jim, how about a lease?" was heard throughout the bustling camp. Oddie and Butler were partners, receiving a 25% royalty on all gold and silver mined from the Butler claims.

The town of Butler began to grow by leaps and bounds. By January 1901, there were 40 men in the camp. The first stagecoach, coming from Sodaville, arrived in Butler on March 24, 1901, with seven passengers. It was a two day trip, with an overnight stay at Crow Springs. The camp consisted of seven shacks, a number of tents and a population of 60. Within weeks, the population had grown to 250. A post office (Willie Sinclair, postmaster), named Butler, opened at the booming camp on April 10, 1901. It was not until March 3, 1905, that the post office changed its name to Tonopah.

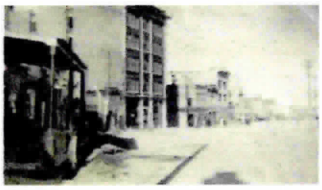
By the summer of 1901, Butler was beginning to make its mark on Nevada's silver production figures.

The mines around the town produced almost $750,000 in gold and silver in 1901, and for the next 40 years, the Tonopah mines were consistent producers. The town now had six saloons, restaurants, assay offices, lodging houses, a number of doctors, lawyers and a rapidly swelling population of 650. The first wedding took place on November 14 when Harry Stimler and Eleanor Whitford were married.



A newspaper came to the town on June 15, 1901, when W.W. Booth, who had published a paper in Belmont, set up the Tonopah Bonanza. The first issue had this greeting: "With this issue, the Tonopah Bonanza glides down the typographical ways and into the sea of journalism. Whether its voyage will be a calm and prosperous one, time along will tell. The Bonanza will at all times act as a free lance, giving credit whenever merited and censure when called for. Our policy in politics will be for the best of the country. That the paper will meet with public favor or condemnation is left to the opinion of the reader and advertiser. We have done our best and sincerely hope it will meet with your approval." The paper listed Butler as its place of publication until March 1905. Booth took over the postmaster duties from Sinclair and served until 1905.

1902 was also very prosperous for the booming town.

Jim Butler had sold out the claims, which were all consolidated and gave birth to a new company, the Tonopah Mining Company. It was incorporated in Delaware, with stock listed on both the Philadelphia and San Francisco exchanges. The company, with J.H. Whiteman as president, controlled 160 acres of mineral-bearing ground around the Tonopah district. The company also had holdings in the Tonopah-Goldfield Railroad and controlled mining companies in Colorado, Canada, California and Nicaragua. The mine workings at Tonopah consisted of three deep shafts with more than 46 miles of lateral workings. The deepest of the three shafts was 1,500'. The ore mined at the site was shipped to Millers, where it was treated in a 100-stamp mill. This facility was used by the company's mines until suitable treatment facilities were built at Tonopah.

The Tonopah-Belmont Mining Company was also formed in 1902.

The company was based in New Jersey and had C.A. Heller as president. The company's property, 11 claims covering more than 160 acres, was on the east side of the property owned by the Tonopah Mining Company. There were two deep vertical shafts, 1,200' and 1,700', with workings covering almost 39 miles. The company also had to ship its ore to Millers until 1912, when its own 60-stamp mill was built at Tonopah. The mill had a capacity of 500 tons. During its years of activity, 1912-1923, it was regarded as one of the country's best equipped and most efficient silver cyanide mills.

Tonopah's mines maintained very high yearly production until the Depression brought a slowdown.

Mine production from 1900 to 1921, the peak years, was almost $121 million. The biggest single year was 1913, when almost $10 million in gold, silver, copper and lead was mined. By World War II, only four major mining companies were operating. A huge fire in October 1942 destroyed the Tonopah Extension mill and property, and spread to a nearby hotel, causing $100,000 in damage. At the end of the war, even these companies had left. The final blow came in 1947 when the Tonopah and Goldfield Railroad folded and its rails were torn up.

Not much mining activity has taken place in Tonopah since then. In 1968, Howard Hughes and his Summa Corporation bought 100 claims in Tonopah, including the Mizpah, Silver Top, and Desert Queen mines. Hopes for a mining revival soon faded after core samples and nothing more were taken. A few of the old mines were re-timbered but never reopened. As of now, total production from the Tonopah district is just more than $150 million, a figure few other places could boast.
